Daddy, Papa...

...or whatever you grew up calling your male parental unit, many of those who are gay never thought we would hear someone calling us by one of those names. As a matter of fact, for those of us in Florida, we were constitutionally banned from adopting until 2010.

Thankfully, things have changed for the better, but let's face it, for any couple, adoption can be a daunting process. We're hoping to help change that. My husband, Nick, and I had the benefit of working with Amy Imber with Connecting Hearts Adoption Services and she was instrumental in helping us adopt our son.

This is a list of partners that were recommended to us when we were planning for adoption. We know the decision process can be daunting, so we thought this might help you with your own journey!

I purposefully listed Amy at Connecting Hearts first as a home study should be your very first step on your Adoption Journey, whether you decide to work with attorneys, consultants, or agencies!

To help differentiate the partners, Connecting Hearts and other Home Study partners have an orange border, Adoption Attorneys have a yellow border, Adoption Consultants have a green border, Adoption Agencies have a blue border, and Adoption Resources have a purple border

What's the difference between attorneys, consultants, and agencies?

Adoption Attorneys are professionals that take care of the legal side of adoption, like walking prospective birth parents through the consent paperwork and helping adoptive parents finalize their adoption in Connecting Hearts Adoption Services offers Florida domestic adoption home studies as well as interstate adoption services, post placement visits, and referrals to reputable Florida adoption agencies and attorneys. Serving families throughout Florida.

Cheryl Payne focuses her practice on adoption law, providing the legal education, guidance and services that the prospective adoptive parent, stepparent, grandparent, or other family relative needs to successfully adopt newborns, toddlers, and adults. She also assists clients who wish to domesticate foreign adoptions. Cheryl has an extensive and successful track record in providing Florida's adoptive parents with an immeasurable depth of passion, empathy, and compassion throughout the family-building process, as well as providing them with the legal protection needed. Most of her adoptions involve bringing children from outside the state of Florida into their new homes within the state.

Guiding Gay Couples in Florida through the Infant Adoption Process!

Daddy, Papa, Father, Papi, or whatever you grew up calling your male parental unit, many of those who are gay never thought we would hear someone calling us by one of those names. As a matter of fact, for those of us in Florida, we were constitutionally banned from adopting until 2010.

Thankfully, things have changed for the better, but let's face it, for any couple, adoption can be a daunting process. I'm hoping to help change that. My husband, Nick, and I had the benefit of working with Amy Imber with Connecting Hearts Adoption Services and she was instrumental in helping us adopt our son.

My goal is to help share some of our learnings with others who are starting on their adoption journeys. While this site is for a school project, the names and contact information of the attorneys, consultants, agencies, and adoption resources are real. Only the "ads" are made up as those companies don't exist.

While you are here, check out the photo gallery below. Amy also helped our friends in the pictures and countless others in Florida. Oh, and if you don't think you are the target demographic for this site, rest assured that the partners listed on this site are committed to inclusivity!

About Us

Nicholas ("Daddy") is originally from the Upper Peninsula of Michigan and works for a major theme park in Central Florida. I'm Emmanuel or "Papa". I'm a native Floridian and currently enrolled in the UF Masters in Mass Communications program with a specialization in Web Design and Online Communication. Nicholas and I met through the Orlando Gay Chorus, where we were both performers.

Nicholas and I discussed adopting before we were engaged to be married in 2016. We met Amy with Connecting Hearts in 2017 but agreed to wait until Nicholas completed his MBA before submitting the home study paperwork in October 2018. We were notified that we might have a potential match with a son in late spring. In June, we welcomed Sebastian into our hearts and our home, and the adoption was finalized in October 2019.

The screenshot shows a mobile website for "Daddy, Papa + ME". The header includes the time (2:06), signal strength, and battery level. The URL is "Not Secure — kragonconsulting.com". The logo "Daddy, Papa + ME" is at the top. A purple navigation bar contains links for "About Us", "Partners", "FAQ", and "Contact Us". The main content features a title "Guiding Gay Couples in Florida through the Infant Adoption Process!" followed by a paragraph about the founders' journey. Below this is another paragraph from a woman about her adoption experience. Further down, there's a section about the founders' relationship and their son's birth. At the bottom, there's a "Picture Gallery" section with three thumbnail images and a "Quick Navigation" menu.

The screenshot shows the proposed mobile website. The layout is similar to the current version but with several changes. The "About Us" section is now a separate page, indicated by a link in the navigation bar. The main content area has been simplified, featuring a larger image of the founders with their son. The footer has been re-styled to be "mobile first", with social media icons and contact information at the bottom.
